Mountain Garden Club announces $1,000 Assistance Award recipient

CONWAY — The Mountain Garden Club has announced its selection of Matthew Coughlan of Conway as this year's recipient of the Mountain Garden Club Assistance Award.

This $1,000 award is presented in support of the STAY MWV organization founded to support young professionals in the Mount Washington Valley.

The award, used for student debt assistance, is granted to a graduate of a post secondary education program, and is employed in the Mount Washington Valley in the area of agriculture, environmental science, conservation, horticulture, floriculture, landscape design, botany, forestry, habitat, forest systems ecology or land management.

Coughlan, 36, earned his bachelor of science degree in recreation resource management from Lyndon State College in Vermont, and his master's degree in environment science from the University of New Hampshire.

He is currently employed as a conservation district manager in Conway, where he develops and implements conservation planning, outreach, education, and volunteer training. Matthew also provides grant writing, conservation programming and volunteer coordination.

In addition, Coughlan is the owner of Recon Trail Design, which provides environmental, conservation and planning services including outdoor recreation project design, and training in rigging and equip-

Members of the Mountain Garden Club believe Coughlan's education, accomplishments and career path embraces the core values of promoting civic and environmental responsibility central to the mission of the club, and wish to congratulate him.

Volunteers rejuvenate the gardens at Tin Mountain

ALBANY — Members and garden volunteers from both the Mountain Garden Club and Tin Mountain Conservation Center joined forces to rejuvenate the gardens the Tin Mountain Nature Learning Center in Albany.

Grace Keeler and Jen Hohenboken both took the lead in gathering volunteers to weed and sow new life into the perennial, native and pollinator gardens and the results are simply beautiful.

With everyone bringing their own tools, skills and expertise and working in separate areas on separate days, the dedicated green-thumbed gardeners were able to work on the gardens while adhering to social distancing guidelines. Despite the bugs, they spent Monday mornings, pulling weeds and breathing life back into the garden beds.

The Nature Learning Center is home to Tin Mountain Conservation Center. In addition to housing the offices, the building welcomes students into its classroom, and the community into the great room for the Nature Program Series, eco forums and Environmental Book Club discussions.

The library holds hundreds of volumes that members are welcome to borrow. The energy efficient building was completed in 2006 with the xeriscape landscape going in the following year.

The special pollinator garden was made possible with a $2,000 grant from The Patricia and Charles Walker Family Fund.

Perennials, flowering bushes including rhododendron and lilacs, as well as many bulbs and native species, help provide a kaleidoscope of colors and textures throughout the seasons. Some of the gardens had become overgrown with weeds and for the less experienced gardener it was often difficult to differentiate between the weeds and the flowers. Each volunteer was both a teacher and a student in identifying which was which.

This joint effort, spearheaded by Bob Santoro, Tin Mountain and Garden Club member and owner of Jackson Home and Garden and led by both Grace and Jen, resulted in beautiful gardens that are balm for the body and soul in these challenging times.

The flowers appear brighter and seem to be blooming with happiness from the care they have received. Iris, peonies, daisies, lupine, poppies and more provide a tapestry of color throughout the many garden plots.

The results of this team effort are stunning, and we invite you to enjoy the trails and gardens at the Nature Learning Center.

If you're a gardener and are looking for an opportunity to put your skills and talent to good use (and meet some great people) or would like to learn more about becoming a member or volunteering go to tinmountain.or and to learn more about the Garden Club, go to mountaingardenclub.org.

We are looking into planting more trees and developing some creative shade solutions for our outdoor space. If you are interested in volunteering or donating toward these efforts, contact Carrie at carrie@northconwaycommunitycenter.org or call (603) 356-2096.

Our flowers are currently in full bloom around the center thanks to the talented volunteers from the Mountain Garden Club. The bushy perennials are alive and buzzing with pollinators and are quite a sight to see. We often spot honeybees, butter-flies and even humming birds enjoying a midday snack.
